

Subject: Horizon Impact Award
Date: 21 May 2019

Dear reader,

Together with environmental justice groups from the Global South, Both ENDS works towards a sustainable, fair and inclusive world. We gather and share information about policy and investments that have a direct impact on people and their livelihood, we engage in joint advocacy, we stimulate the dialogue between stakeholders and we promote and support sustainable local alternatives.

We see that most innovative, inclusive and sustainable developments for a fair society evolve from citizen based initiatives and not from institutionalized phenomena. Whether we talk about farmer managed natural regeneration or inclusive participatory certification or collective action to change extractive behaviours of large scale enterprises...

We would like to learn more on how we can better work together with these sometimes fluid or loose organized cooperations, how they can be judged on their fairness, sustainability and inclusiveness, how they can be supported to reach higher impact, what kind of challenges occur in this process and how policy can give room to these developments by giving support and trust instead of keeping control by outdated regulation.

We are convinced that the institute for collective action is able to provide us with a lot of learnings, contacts and inspiration to strengthen our work.
